April is child abuse prevention month.

100% of abuse is preventable.

Taking the time to report suspected abuse can significantly alter the course of an investigation, protection, and long-term health of a child.

All individuals are considered mandated reporters of child abuse.

TEN-4-FACESp Bruising Rule

TEN-4-FACESp is an acronym used to help screen children under 4 years old for possible abuse. This bruising rule helps providers and clinical staff identify when a bruise is more likely to be caused by abuse than an accidental injury.

Paying attention to bruising can help recognize kids at risk for physical abuse and potentially improve outcomes with early intervention.

Before leaving your child with a new caregiver...

- Does this person have a history of getting easily frustrated with anyone, including other adults, children, or pets?
- Has this person ever been known to become physically violent or aggressive with you or anyone else?
- Do they misunderstand, become frustrated, or angry with normal childhood behaviors such as crying, toilet training accidents, or messy environments?
- Does this person become upset or jealous of the time and attention you give your child?
- Does this person think it is okay to shake, hit, throw, or otherwise harm a child? Have you seen this person handle your child or any other child roughly?
- Have you noticed patterned bruises such as handprints, loop marks, or “U” shaped bruises on your child after being in the care of this person?
- If your infant is 4 months of age or younger, have you noticed ANY bruising/injury, anywhere, after being in the care of this person?
- If your child is 4 years of age or younger, have you noticed bruising/injury to your child’s torso, ears, neck, angle of the jaw, cheeks, eyelids; bleeding on the white portions of the eye; or injuries inside your child’s mouth after being in the care of this person?

If you answered “yes,” to any one of these questions, please reconsider leaving your child with this person.

SAFESITTER

Essentials

Designed to prepare students to be safe when they're home alone, watching younger siblings, or babysitting.

The Instructor-led class is filled with fun games and role-playing exercises. Students even get to use manikins to practice rescue skills like choking rescue!
